

Overview:

SWAN Youth Service is a regional youth service based in North Inner City Dublin. We work with young people aged 10-24 years.

We work from a model of critical social education, engaging young people in processes to critically evaluate their own experiences and wider social norms, and to understand the structural inequalities impacting them.

Working together we find ways to make young people's voices be heard.

We respond to issues impacting on young people through engaging them in a range of educational programs including music, digital media and arts programs, sexual health, gender issues, anti-bullying, anti-racism and intercultural programs, STEAM work, communication skills, social analytical development, arts and crafts, cooking, mental health and well-being and physical health.
